STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

In consequence of the introduction of radio-telegraph into India it has become necessary to amend the Indian Telegraph Act, 1885 (XIII of 1885), in order to enable the possession and working of wireless apparatus to be regulated more strictly than is possible under that Act. The opportunity has been taken to make certain other amendments in the Act, which experience has shown to be desirable. The details of these amendments are explained in the sub-joined Notes on Clauses.

The 14th May 1913.

W. H. CLARK.

Notes on Clauses.

Clause 2.—The Act as at present extends only to British India and to subjects of His Majesty residing in Native States. Following the analogy of the Indian Post Office Act, 1898 (VI of 1898), section 1 (3) of the Telegraph Act has been amended by this clause, so as to extend the operation of the Act to all servants of the King residing in Native States, whether British subjects or not.

Clause 3.—The present definition of "telegraph" in section 3 (1) of the Act covers only appliances and apparatus for transmitting or making telegraphic, telephonic or other communications by means of electricity, galvanism or magnetism. It is possible to construct wireless telegraphic apparatus capable merely of receiving telegrams, and this clause provides for the amendment of the definition of "telegraph" so as to include apparatus for receiving messages.

Clause 4.—The Act, as it stands at present, contains no specific provision for regulating the establishment and working of wireless telegraphs on ships. Under section 1 of the English Wireless Telegraphy Act, 1904 (4 Edw. VII, Chapter 24), wireless telegraphic apparatus cannot be installed or worked on board any British ship in British territorial waters without a license granted by the Postmaster General. Licenses granted under this section would probably be possessed by all British ships entering Indian territorial waters. There is, however, no power under the English Act to license ships to use wireless telegraphy in territorial waters outside British territorial waters. Moreover, some provision in the Indian Act is necessary to meet the case of foreign vessels within Indian waters. It is, therefore, proposed to add a second proviso to section 4 of the Act, taking power to control the establishment, maintenance and working of wireless telegraphs on ships within Indian territorial waters.

Under the existing proviso to section 4 of the Act, the power to grant a license for the establishment, maintenance or working of a telegraph is vested solely in the Governor General in Council. Thus, all applications for licenses, even of the most petty nature, have to be submitted to the Government of India. In the majority of cases, the Government of India are not in a position to examine the applications and the reference to them is a mere formality. It is, therefore, desirable to delegate this power to the "telegraph authority," that is, to the Director-General, such delegation being made subject to such restrictions and conditions as the Governor General in Council may think fit to impose. Provision for this delegation of power has been made in the second addition to section 4 proposed in this clause.

Clause 5 (proposed new section 19A) and clause 8 (proposed new section 25A).—Under the existing law (sections 13 and 17 of the Act), local authorities or private owners may require the telegraph authority to remove or alter any telegraph post, etc., standing on their properties. There is, however, nothing in the Act to prevent an owner of property from taking, without giving notice to the telegraph authority, such action with the property as may cause or be likely to cause injury to, or interference with, a telegraph line placed upon or near it. A clause has therefore been inserted in the Bill on the lines of section 8 of the English Telegraph Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict., Chapter 76), to prevent the execution without due notice of any work likely to be injurious to telegraph lines or posts (proposed new section 19A). The Bill also provides for the recovery of damages in cases where any works are commenced or carried out without due notice and their execution results in injury to telegraph lines or posts and for the imposition of a fine where telegraphic communication is interrupted by any such work (proposed new section 25A).

Clause 6 (proposed new section 19B).—Under sections 10 and 11 of the Act as it now stands, the power to place telegraph lines and posts upon private property is confined to the telegraph authority, that is the Director-General of Telegraphs. It is apprehended that this restriction may hinder the legitimate development of telephone enterprise in India, and a clause has therefore been inserted in the Bill to empower the Governor General in Council to extend, by notification in the Gazette of India, to any licensee under section 4, any or all of the powers possessed by the telegraph authority under part III of the Act.

Clause 6.—The importation of wireless telegraphic apparatus into British India, except under a license granted by the Government of India, is prohibited. The necessary apparatus can, however, be manufactured in India, and it would in practice be extremely difficult to ascertain whether such apparatus was being used for reading radio telegraphic messages transmitted from Government stations. It is, therefore, considered necessary to impose a severer penalty on the establishment and working of wireless telegraphs without a license than is at present provided for by section 20 of the Act. This opportunity has been taken to substitute the penalty of confiscation for the continuing fine now leviable under that section. This follows section 1 (f) of the English Wireless Telegraphy Act, 1904 (4 Edw. VII, Chapter 24), and forfeiture seems a more suitable penalty to impose than the existing penalty of a continuing fine.

Clause 7.—The new section 20A introduced by this clause is merely a reproduction of a part of the existing section 20, which it is proposed to revise (see clause 6), and needs no explanation.

Clause 8.—Cases have occurred in which trading firms have distributed advertisements to the public by means of imitation inland telegraph forms and covers with impressions of name and date stamps similar to those used on actual telegrams sent out from Government telegraph offices. The presence causes annoyance to the public, and might be resorted to for fraudulent purposes. It is, therefore necessary to introduce a new section into the Indian Telegraph Act on the lines of section 64 of the English Post Office Act, 1908 (8 Edw. VII, Chapter 48), prohibiting the imitation of the envelopes, forms and marks of the Telegraph Department.

Clause 10.—The addition made by this clause to section 34 of the Act, confers on the Commissioners of Police in presidency-towns the powers exercisable by Magistrates of the first and second class under the proposed new section 19A. This amendment calls for no explanation.
